Parr Vineyards is in Mason County, which is in the Texas Hill Country AVA, just north west of Hye. Owners Robb and Dilek Parr planted this Tempranillo block in 2009. The vineyard is situated on a very unique soil type for the Texas Hill Country called Upper Hickory soil, which is not the typical calcareous soil that dominates the region, but is instead decomposed granite, quartz gravel, and sand with a sandstone underbase. Another distinctive quality of this vineyard and its soil, is that it has a lower pH level than most in Texas. This is our third vintage of Parr Tempranillo and its bold fruit and mineral characteristics obtained from this vineyard year after year are unmatched.

Antique ruby adorns the glass, guiding a nose of oak & rum raisin. A strong structure is evident. Silt & chalky tannins hit every part of the palate & bring about an earthy quality. Dried fig & juicy plum are featured with clove & mushroom to balance. Finish lingers for a bit, leaving behind pepper & cocoa powder. To experience its true heartiness, a long life in the cellar is best. Drink 2018 (decanted) through 2030.
